HAIR NATURALLY ABUNDANT.

When It Is Free of Dandruff It Grows Luxuriantly. Hair preparations and dandruff cures, as a rule, are sticky or irritating affairs that do no earthly good. Hair, when not diseased, grows naturally luxuriantly. Dandruff is the cause of nine-tenths of all hair trouble, and dandruff is caused by a germ. The only way to cure dandruff is to kill the germ; and so far, the only hair preparation that will positively destroy that germ is Newbro's Herculicide—absolutely harmless, free from grease, sediment, dyes or dangerous drugs. It always itching instantly; makes hair glossy and soft as silk. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect"—dandruff.

Mines and Minerals of Arizona

New York, June 17.—Mexican dollars, 47 1/2; silver, 59 1/2; copper and lead, unchanged.

Wickenburg, Ariz., June 12.—(Special correspondence of The Republic.)—Your correspondent was a visitor at Oro Grande yesterday. They now have the shaft down 100 feet, at which depth the ore body continues the same as when the rich strike was first announced. On the 100-foot level they are working two shifts in the drift running up the hill, it being in now over 100 feet. As soon as the blower is installed and the good air problem solved, they will be able to put on two shifts with four sets of men drifting each way with the ledge and cross-cutting each way, and until this is done no one is able to estimate this mammoth ore body.

For people realize the magnitude of this strike, from the reports that have come out. It has been variously estimated by mining experts as being worth from $200,000 to $500,000. A simple way of expressing what they have, would be that a body equal to a cube 100 feet square has been opened up so far, without reaching any walls of any kind. This body of ore at any point will assay $20 to the ton, and as high as $50 to $60. A safe figure is that the whole body is $60 rock, which brings the value of the ore in sight at about $60,000, to say nothing about the possible extent of the ore body the last eighty feet.

As soon as the 200-foot level is reached and cross-cuts run a plant of the right size and kind can be figured on—anything less than eighty stamps would be a waste of very valuable time. Work is being pushed to the limit, and they now have employed all of the men they can possibly use, the number being over twenty.

After visiting the works the conversation turned to the history of this very valuable piece of ground, of which the following is a part: The gulches on the property were first dry washed in the early '60's, about the time Henry Wickburg commenced operations on the Vulture, which made this section first famous as a gold producer. After this every gulch on the Hassayampis between the box canyons above and below town were dry washed and the gulches now called the Oro Grande gulches, were worked over again. It is known that the Oro Grande lead, that is, the quartz croppings have been held from the first discovery of gold in the '60's. The only work done aside from dry washing, was done with a lead pencil, and the names of the original locators are not now known to your correspondent. The first real history of the Oro Grande is a quartz claim, dated from the latter '70's, when a man by the name of Copeland, located the ground and sunk a shaft to the depth of sixty feet, which is on an incline following the quartz croppings. About this time the Vulture mine, then above town, was running and some of the ore was tried, but on account of the copper, it was not a success, as it would not plate.

After this, an arrastra was built at the head of the box canyon above Hoarke's ranch, and the ores taken out and packed over the hill and arrastra. This did not pay, and the claim was abandoned and nothing further done, except the posting of notices at regular intervals, by different dry washers. Some people call them the real Hassayampis, but one by one they have lost their "long hair," and they are not now a distinct type as formerly.

The records of Yavapai county show that this ground was relocated again in March, 1896, by Wm. M. Scott and John Lucas, who located a claim called San Pedro, and started what is now the main shaft of the Oro Grande, and sold the property to a man by the name of A. J. Pigeon, now of Phoenix, Ariz. Mr. Pigeon did a little work on the property and let it lapse by going off to Alaska to hunt gold, with a fortune within 100 feet. He left the shaft twenty-four feet deep with a short cross-cut in the bottom. As soon as Mr. Pigeon's rights ran out, a man named Schultz, located the ground for himself and R. W. Baxter. The first and only work was to "work Mr. Baxter for the usual grub-stake. Mr. Baxter wrote out two sets of location notices, sent one to the recorder and put the other in his safe, where they turned up in December, 1900. All this was done in the month of April, 1900.

The two claims thus located were called the "Emma" and the "Gold." Just after this was supposed to have occurred, along comes Al Weising and Dan Genung over the old Roarke trail from the Box canyon to Wickenburg, it leading right by what is now the Oro Grande shaft. About this time the gold strike made by George White had been announced and this claim looked pretty good to them, so they put on a notice about March 1st, 1900, and instead of doing the work, they appreciated the value of the lead pencil as a labor-saving device and came back on June 1st, 1900, and changed the names and dates.

This ran until September first, during which time Mr. Weising went to Stanton, and after the time was up, he tried to induce Mr. George B. Upton and B. O. Hatfield to go down with him to see the property, which they did on December, 1900, having come down in this section to look at a copper property belonging to James Munch, Mr. Upton having in view the intention of placing it while east, a trip he expected to make shortly. At this time he was operating at Stanton for the Mountain Side Mining company, with Mr. Hatfield in charge of the work. When they reached the property, now belonging to the Oro Grande company, they looked the ground over very carefully, and could find absolutely no trace of work done in recent years, or any notices of location, except the ones posted and used for six months by Weising and Genung. So notices were placed on the property and Mr. Weising returned to Stanton for a prospecting outfit that Messrs. Upton and Hatfield furnished him, as well as a man to help with the work.

About this time Mr. Upton went east and intended to dispose of the property, as he had a customer for a small developing proposition, and he thought the showing as a copper proposition, would justify their taking hold. During this time Mr. Hatfield remained at Stanton and took occasional trips down to the new claims. Mr. Upton was compelled to return sooner than he expected, and in the limited time, did not do anything with the property. On his return he felt that he could not afford to carry on development, having large holdings on Rich Hill, so rather than let the property lay idle, as it had for years, he took the matter up with G. E. Lamb, of Clinton, Ia., and afterward entered into a contract with him, whereby he (Lamb) was to get control of the property and furnish money for its development, which he did.

At this time the property was not considered of more value than a prospect, and not an extra good one at that, and as more of an inducement to Mr. Lamb than a desire to do so, they put in the agreement when it was drawn up, that they would take stock instead of cash for their parts, thereby allowing Mr. Lamb to organize the company, acquire title and do a little development work without a very great outlay of cash, as it did not appear at that time that it would justify extensive work. People now go up to the Oro Grande and find Mr. Upton feeling good, and Mr. Hatfield smiling and congratulating them on their find, but it must be said that it was Mr. Lamb's money that made the mine, showing that good judgment linked with capital made Oro Grande possible in Arizona, of whose vast resources no little is known.

Mr. Upton, when asked what effect the impending litigation would have on the working of the property, said none. The Oro Grande Mining company will soon have to keep track of their claims by number.

A short time ago, when Mr. Lamb was out, he expressed his disgust for the way one was hampered, and nothing short of a property like the Oro Grande now is, could induce him to spend money on it, and he even suggested closing down and doing absolutely nothing until such time as they could go ahead without annoyances which they now have to contend with.

In order to effect the deal Mr. Upton bonded the Weising interest for $3,333 on December 14, 1900, and assigned the same to G. E. Lamb on January 2, 1901. Mr. Lamb refused to take it up at that price, and took a new bond from Weising on January 3rd, for $2,666.66, and had the deed placed in escrow in Prescott National bank, taking it out March 18, 1901. In December last, after the camp was established, came R. W. Baxter claiming the property, and after some correspondence on the subject with Mr. Upton, then Stanton, a meeting was arranged on the ground in the presence of witnesses. After arriving on the ground Mr. Baxter was convinced that his title was not what it should be and he sold out two days later. Mr. Upton made it a give or take proposition for $500, but Mr. Baxter refused that amount, and after some discussion accepted $750 for his and Shultz's share giving a deed to same.

After this Weising received his pay according to agreement, and while in Prescott having a good time a couple of lawyers looking for some "easy money" got hold of him, making him think he was a fit subject for the asylum and not able to conduct his own business, and showed him the necessity of a guardian. The result being that they brought the suit that will be tried next month. On the face it shows that the plaintiff has no chance to win, but the $2,000 that Weising had left seems to have been the object of the litigation, i. e., it would look that way to a man up a tree. Just think of an old Hassayampis' mind being bewildered in after years with the thought of how much good "boogie" that $2,000 would have bought.

After the first indications of the value of the new strike Messrs. Upton and Hatfield took up the adjoining ground for protection and room, knowing that they had a large property to deal with, and after taking just what was essential for the working and managing of their property, they announced the strike, the result being a rush and the location of all ground out in that section.

Daniel McNeil and D. J. Curry were among the first ones on the ground and happened to get on one of the company's claims, but when their attention was called to the monuments and the location work they took off their notices.

The next man, a Mr. Doll of Phoenix, came along, jumped out of a buggy, put up a location monument and when his attention was called to the monuments and location work, it seemed that instead of doing what the first parties did, he proceeded to Phoenix and associated himself with a couple of Phoenix lawyers—Baker and Alexander—and proceeded to do a second location which could result only in the involving the title of the Oro Grande Mining company, and as it has been expressed, prevent them from selling stock. How foolish, when no stock can be bought at any price! The company have ten claims, nine beside the one Messrs. Doll, Baker and Alexander want so badly.

The future of Wickenburg and the outcome of the Oro Grande are so closely associated that almost to a unit the citizens desire that the litigation should all end favorably to the Oro Grande people. Knowing the facts, they feel it can terminate no other way.

ANOTHER BIG DEAL

Sale of the Sterling Property in Sonora, Mexico.

A correspondent of the Los Angeles Mining Review writes in his paper from Nogales on June 10 as follows: This week was consummated the sale of a big mining property situated in Sonora, Mexico, about eighty miles south of this place. It is known as the Sterling property. Mr. Fred Sterling of Nogales having purchased it some years ago. It is a silver-gold proposition, and has yielded some fine ore, assaying as high as $600 in gold and 670 ounces silver per ton.

The new company is composed of Mr. Fred Sterling and Mr. Merriweather of Nogales, and the Messrs. M. H. Sloan, James Slough, Joseph Bates, cashier of the First State bank, and others of Dunkirk, Ind.

The purchase price of the property is not made public. Arrangements have been made to at once begin development work on an extensive scale, and Mr. Robert Burnham of Providence, R. I., has been engaged to manage the work, while Mr. Sterling will act as financial agent for the company in Arizona. Mr. Burnham was formerly a resident of Tombstone, in charge of one of the mills at that place, and has been engaged in mining in the west for the past thirty years.

There are fifteen pertenencias in the group, and the company through Mr. Sterling, has denounced (located) 1,600 adjacent and contiguous pertenencias. If preliminary work yields expected results extensive works will be erected in the near future.

A ripple of excitement pervades local mining circles in Nogales. It is learned that an outfit from California is being moved into the territory near Fort Huachuca. Old float has been found in that region from time to time and it is now to be thoroughly prospected. Tucson parties are furnishing the money.

Failure

In life's more often due to exhausted nerve force than to lack of capital. Strong nerves are the capital that helps men conquer conditions. When people lose their capital they set to work to regain it. When we lose our nerve force we ought to seek a means of getting it back. There is a way, certain and scientific.
